

Comments: I intended to stock other Randall variations but the demand has been so great that I decided against it. 95% of the knives listed are in stock. However, with the worst in the East I'd suggest you purchase the knife you need while still available. I only carry knives that meet my standard of quality and value. All give you a fair return for your dollar. Thanks to those who have purchased from me in the past for your suggestions, support and friendship. Again, I pledge to give you my individual attention and deal with you as I prefer to be dealt with.

Lay-Away: For a 10% deposit I'll hold any knife, or knives, for you for up to four months. There is no charge for this service, but please keep your account active with partial payments. Order will be shipped upon final payment. I feel this will enable anyone to purchase a fine knife.

Special Orders: If you prefer a Randall variation that isn't listed please inform me and I'll be happy to include it with my usual order. In most cases the delivery time is 6 to 10 weeks. Include 10% deposit.

All other orders will be sent postpaid within the U.S. If you prefer airmail (recommended for Alaska and Hawaii) please include extra for additional charge. If you are in a rush for a knife and want me to send it C.O.D. please figure $2.00 extra. Conn. residents please figure the present sales tax and include half of this amount with your order... I'll pay the other half. To assure prompt delivery please send certified check or money order. Your personal check is acceptable but will delay shipment.

RUANA HOLLOW GROUND HANDCRAFTED KNIVES

These knives are made by a combination of handcraft processes and the use of modern power tools. The blades are made of the finest Hi-Carbon spring steel, forged with a modern power hammer, free hand hollowground, individually oil quenched and heat treated. The handles are made of aluminum, cast directly on the tang, with native Montana elk horn inserts beveled and riveted.

This type of knife has proven satisfactory for over 41 years, and if kept properly sharpened will give years of good cutting service.

Standard and De Luxe models are both made of the same materials, same care in workmanship, only the designs are different.

BATTLE BOWIE: A more traditional bowie shaped fighter on the largest practical scale. Maintains the cutting capacity of the Battle Dirk, with the sharpened top edge and keeps the point in line with the handle to insure accuracy when delivering the thrust. The sub-hilt is again added for security and control.

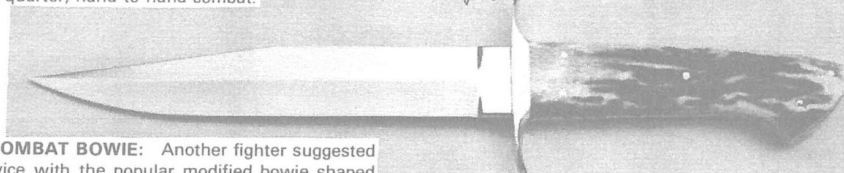

BATTLE DIRK: This grind combines the strength and slashing ability of the spearpoint with the thrusting superiority of the stiletto, and is acknowledged to be the best and most efficient shape for close-quarter, hand-to-hand combat.

Bill Bagwell Master Knifsmith

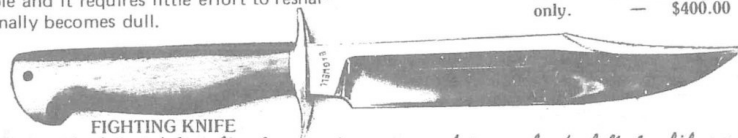

Bill Bagwell first began turning out hand-forged knives in 1970, and while he attracted considerable nation-wide publicity through such publications as GUNSPORT, GUN WEEK, GUNS, GUN WORLD, THE AMERICAN BLADE, etc., he was dissatisfied with his work. From approximately 1974 to 1975 Bagwell made only a few dozen knives, devoting his time to studying and improving his product.

In early 1976 Bagwell finally achieved the high degree of perfection, both in terms of appearance and performance, that he had been attempting to reach. In spite of his layoff as a full-time cutler, it should be noted that he was, during this time span, one of only two smiths offering genuine Damascus steel blades.

DAMASCUS STEEL

Speaking in very general terms, Damascus steel is essentially alternating layers of iron and steel hammer welded together. This process is repeated time and again until the bar of steel may contain as many as 2048 layers. The amount of time and energy required to produce such a blade is staggering. Many hunting-size blades require as much as 400 pounds of coal!

The result is a blade that has a distinct pattern, which the smith may, if he has the ability, direct and control. The finished blade will hold an edge in a fashion superior to the very finest of today's high carbon tool steels, yet a blade made of Damascus is extremely flexible and it requires little effort to resharpen when it finally becomes dull.

FIGHTING KNIFE

Bill's production is limited but I usually have a dozen or more knives on hand, half of which are Damascus. He prefers to make the knife as you want it rather than a standard model. Being his exclusive dealer service is usually prompt, although military orders are filled first. Bill is a member of the American Bladesmiths Society.

Roger has been making knives since 1974 and is presently helping me with special orders. He is a fine craftsman and if you have a design we will be happy to give a quote. All we ask is a full sized drawing. I always have Roger's knives on hand.

I'm anxious to handle other fine makers knives. Quality is what I look for, so if you know someone who is willing to work with a dealer please have him contact me. I believe in purchasing the knives I offer, rather than accept them on consignment. Also interested in handling collector forged tomahawks.

Most small businessmen work much harder than most people could ever imagine. One such person is Dave Anderson. If you need quality knife-making materials you will be pleased with Dave's service and prices. Catalog $1.00

DOUBLE EXTRA FORGED STEEL

After long research and experimentation, Bill Bagwell has developed a process by which his standard steel (not Damascus) is improved so dramatically that the qualities of blades made by this process approach that of Damascus, although the Double Extra Forged blades may be offered at a much lower cost. "To the best of my knowledge, no other smith of the 20th century has offered blades made using this technique," states Bagwell. Essentially, this process requires an extremely sophisticated technique, and the heat-treat is, to say the least, highly critical.

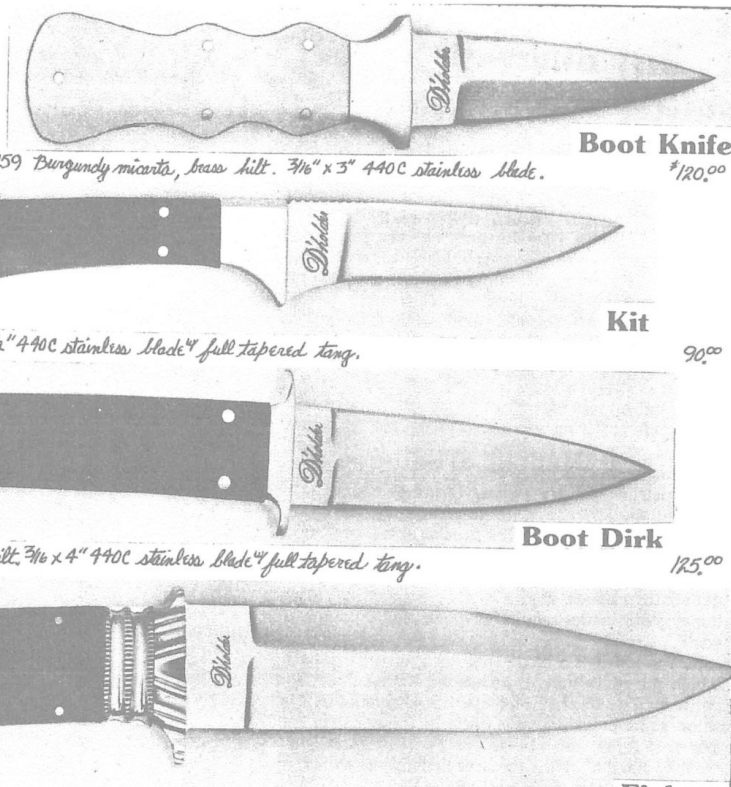

A Double Extra Forged Steel Bagwell blade will hold an edge as well as any steel available today with the exception of Genuine Damascus. Moreover, it is flexible, and the ease with which it may be sharpened will amaze the veteran knife user. Due to the fact that the cost of this procedure is very little higher than Bagwell's "old" practice in terms of production, Bagwell is discontinuing the availability of his standard forged blades.

Scrimshaw by Rick Bowles

Rick has agreed to do scrimshaw for my customers after doing work on my personal knives. Not only is his work excellent and delivery prompt, but it is also reasonably priced. I'll be ordering more knives with ivory micarta and will try to keep completed knives on hand.

PRICES SUBJECT TO CHANGE WITH MAKER INCREASES.

Dear Dr. Stein,

A Confederate Louis V'route commando handle, lagged hilt (standard) and brass butt cap would be $282. I don't stock this variation but I could include it with my Oct. 23rd shipment if you wish. Mr. Randall is now looking customer orders for delivery in March of 1982. I have knives reserved every month. Thanks

Best regards,
DOUG KENEFICK
